Introduction

In Northern Ireland, the welfare of animals is governed by the Welfare of Animals Act (Northern Ireland) 2011 (the 2011 Act). The 2011 Act includes a duty of care in respect of all animals under the permanent or temporary control of a person. Responsibility for the welfare of an animal remains with the relevant owner at all times.

The review of the implementation of the 2011 Act, which took place in 2014 to 2016, recommended that the then Department of Agriculture and Rural Development publish an annual report setting out information relevant to animal welfare enforcement. This is the sixth report published using information provided by the three enforcement bodies and detailing the range and level of animal welfare enforcement activities that took place during 2021.

Background

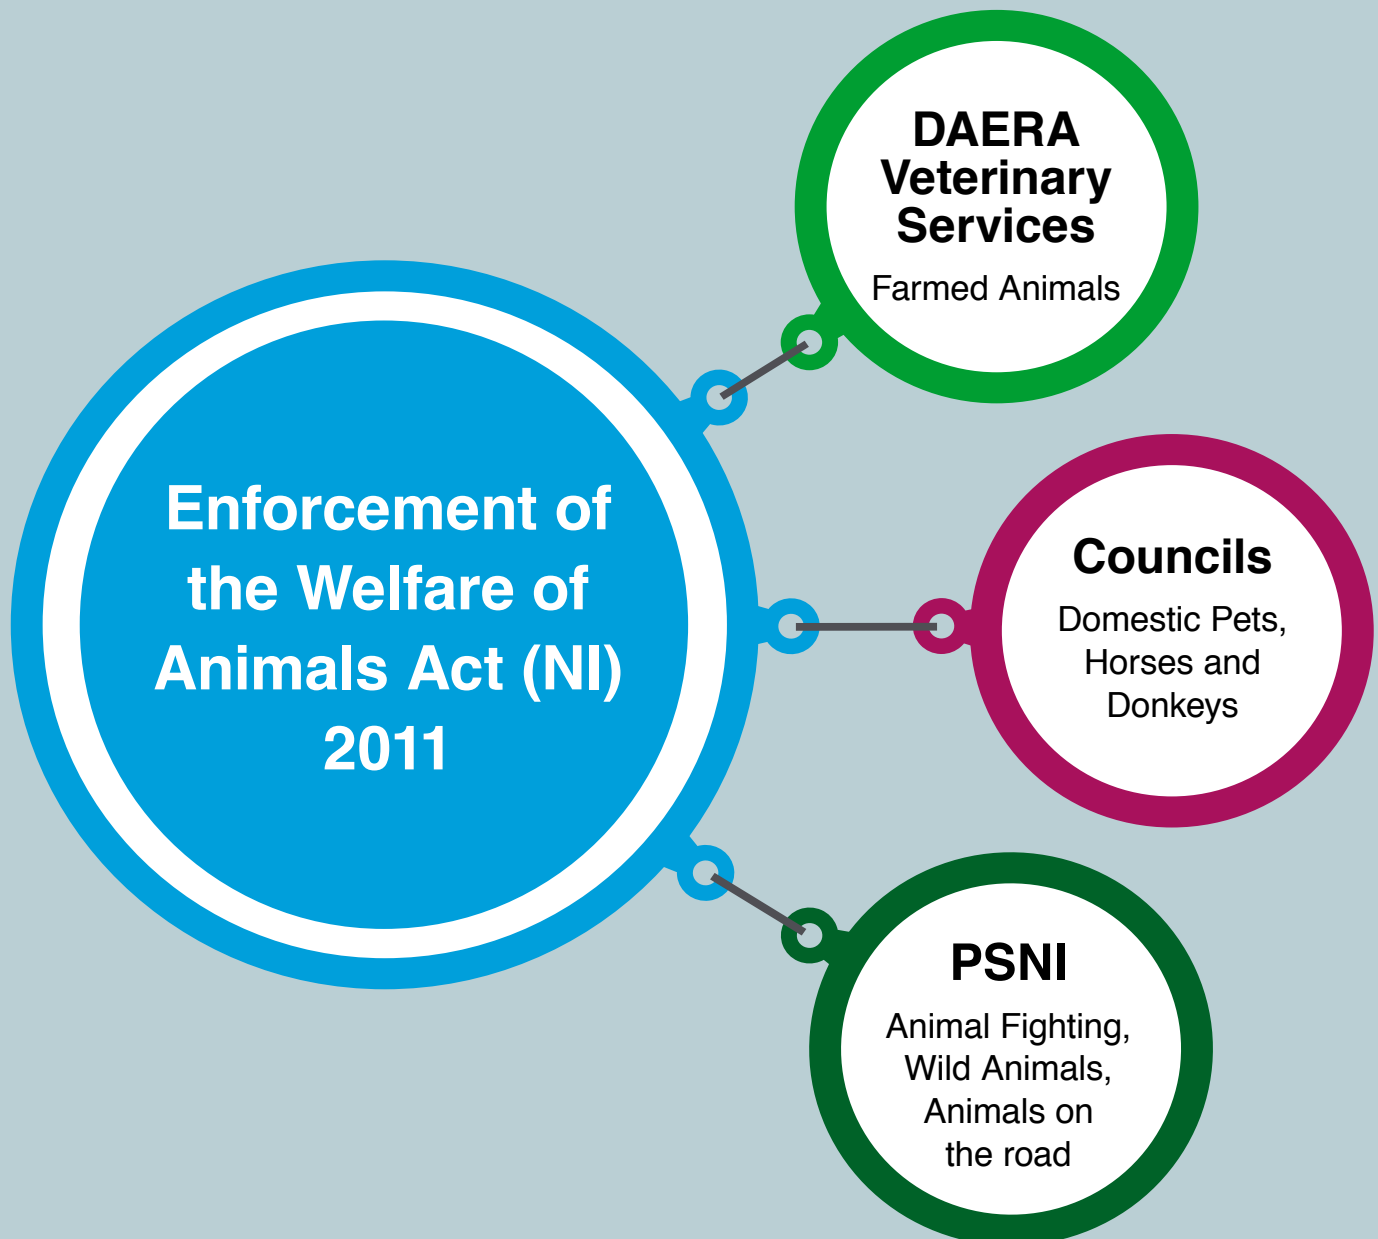

The 2011 Act provides the same level of protection for both farmed and non-farmed animals and sets out the five needs of an animal.

The vast majority of owners and keepers comply with their duty of care. However, there are occasions when owners fail to do so and the 2011 Act sets out offences regarding animal welfare. For example, it is an offence to fail to take reasonable steps to ensure that the welfare needs of an animal are met or to take action, or fail to take action, that causes an animal to suffer unnecessarily.

Responsibility for the enforcement of the 2011 Act has been conferred on three enforcement agencies; Department of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs (DAERA), Police Service of Northern Ireland (PSNI) and local councils.

If a member of the public has any concerns regarding the welfare of an animal they should contact the relevant enforcement body. Contact information can be found in the nidirect.gov.uk Animal Welfare section. Full details of all complaints will be recorded and passed to enforcement officers who will investigate and take action to ensure the owner or keeper complies with their obligations.

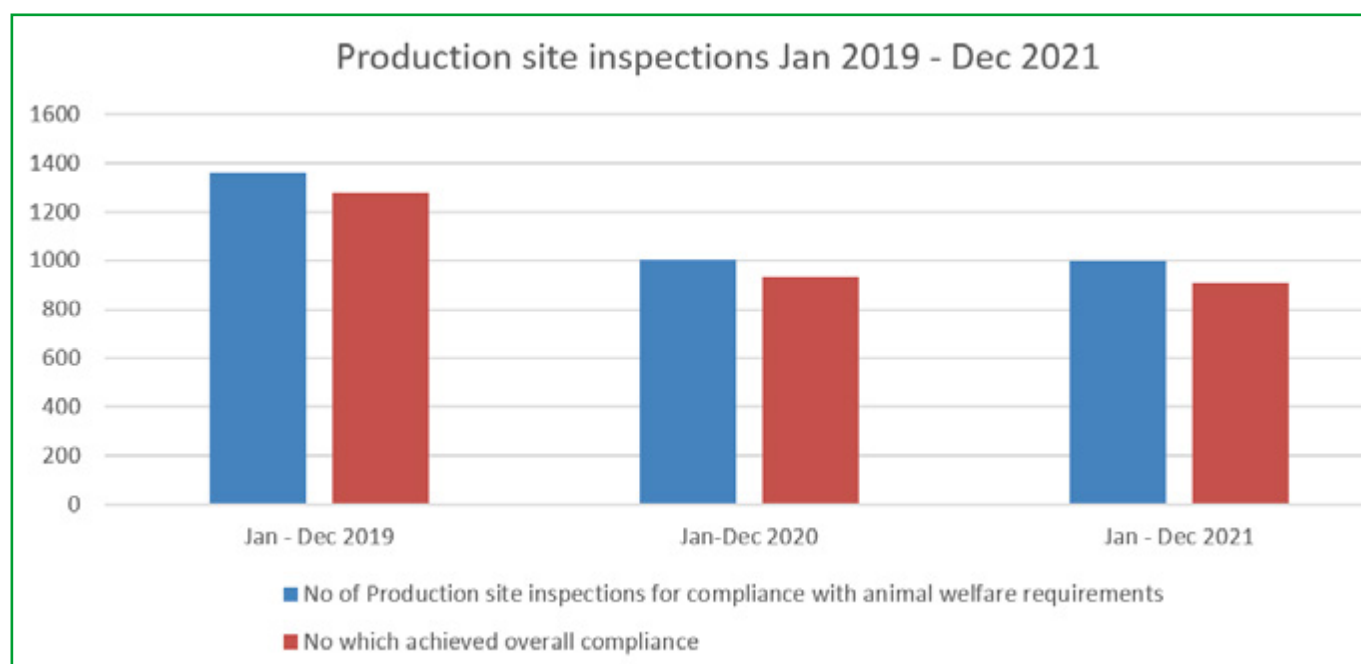

DAERA enforces the Welfare of Farmed Animals Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2012 which were made under the 2011 Act. The work is delivered by DAERA Veterinary Service Inspectors and Veterinary Officers located across Northern Ireland in 12 local DAERA Direct offices. DAERA also has responsibility for the licensing and inspection of pet shops, animal boarding, riding and zoological establishments under the Welfare of Animals Act (Northern Ireland) 1972.

Veterinary Service Inspectors may utilise a range of options when dealing with an animal welfare case. For example, they may provide advice, give a warning, issue the owner with a legally binding Improvement Notice or initiate a prosecution.

The following information outlines the enforcement actions taken by DAERA during 2021.

Farmed Animal Welfare Inspections

From 1 January 2021 to 31 December 2021, 1000 production site inspections for compliance with animal welfare requirements were completed. Some of these inspections were at randomly selected sites. Regional Councils' Animal Welfare Service

The 2011 Act requires local councils to enforce animal welfare requirements in respect of non-farmed animals, for example, domestic pets of any vertebrate species and equines. Councils have adopted a collaborative regional approach to delivering its animal welfare service with nine appointed Animal Welfare Officers enforcing the Act. These officers have statutory enforcement powers and can take a range of action to improve the welfare of non-farmed animals including: providing advice; issuing improvement notices; taking animals into their possession (in extreme cases of suffering), and initiating prosecution action. The following information outlines the enforcement action taken by local councils during 2021.
