

Carer Respite Scheme Information

Our Policy

The Carers Respite Break Scheme provides short breaks and respite care breaks for primary carers of officers, ex officers, parents and the widow/ers of murdered officers who have suffered as a direct result of the terrorist campaign and who meet the NIPF eligibility criteria.

For the purposes of this scheme, a primary carer is defined as someone who has the sole responsibility for caring for an eligible client who has been injured, or requires the level of care as detailed below, and who would ordinarily be unable to take a respite break because of their responsibility for the dependant.

It will be for the carer to decide how to use the funding but the amount is intended to provide the carer with a short break and any respite service required during the break if the dependent is unable to travel with them.

Eligibility

This scheme is designed to recognise the role of the primary carer of disabled officers, ex officers, parents and widows. Normally the primary carer will be a spouse but it is recognised that in some circumstances it may be someone else. - Eligible Ex-officers
- Eligible Widow/ers
- Eligible Parents

Information Requirements
