CHAIR'S FOREWORD

In this important year, as we reflect on the successes and challenges which the International Fund for Ireland has faced since the signing of the historic Good Friday/Belfast Agreement in 1998, we must also consider how we protect and strengthen the gains which were so hard won and to ensure that the next twenty-five years sees those communities which the IFI supports fully realise the dividends of the peace process.

The IFI can be proud of its many achievements but also recognises that significant challenges need to be addressed to achieve real peace and reconciliation on the island of Ireland.

Social and economic development were severely impaired by the violence and disruption of the conflict. Prior to the Agreement, the IFI was involved in a period of dialogue and engagement with a range of partners and focused on creating economic opportunities, particularly within disadvantaged areas, in an attempt to encourage dialogue and reconciliation between communities.

In 2022, local communities across Northern Ireland and the southern border counties faced significant obstacles which have challenged the IFI to continuously evaluate how it delivers on its commitment to facilitate a sustainable peace across the island of Ireland. The absence of the NI Executive and Assembly and subsequent lack of political decision making in Northern Ireland has further exacerbated these challenges, as has the ongoing uncertainty around the impact of Brexit, the future of the NI Protocol and the ongoing cost-of-living crisis.

In the last year, the IFI's programmes have included specialised interventions to divert young people away from the threat of paramilitary recruitment, delivering a range of accreditations to more than 3,200 young people with a further 528 supported into further education and training. This is at a time when local communities, and in particular, young people are particularly vulnerable to the dangerous influence of paramilitary groups who continue to prey on society.

Cross border relations are complex, as recently highlighted by a joint research project between The Irish Times and Arins which examined the political and personal relations across the island of Ireland. The continued threat of paramilitary activity and political and economic uncertainty will also play a key role in the future prosperity of the communities in which the IFI work and will feature prominently as each of the four IFI funded programmes adapt and deliver vital interventions and support.

Public conversations on key issues such as the constitutional position of the island of Ireland and the ongoing impact of paramilitary activity in society shows an awareness that these matters are impacting people's lives and require engagement and further dialogue to understand further.

The IFI acknowledges that a key focus of many of the conversations relates to the impact which the conflict has had on communities, recognising that many are not yet in a position to fully embrace and support. Intergenerational Trauma continues to be a key feature and as an organisation, the IFI is committed to working in collaboration with partners to identify long-term solutions for individuals and groups who require tailored support and understanding.

With the potential of a prolonged period of political inactivity, it is vital that work on the ground with local communities continues, supporting those who are yet to reap the rewards the peace process.

INTRODUCTION

The Board of the Fund is appointed jointly by the British and Irish Governments. It is assisted by an Advisory Committee comprising of officials appointed by the two Governments.

The administration of the Fund is provided by a Secretariat, headed by Joint Directors General, based in Belfast and Dublin. A range of bodies act as Managing Agents for the Fund in Northern Ireland.

In addition, the Fund has three Programme Managers, located across the southern border counties, who act as local contact points and assist prospective applicants to identify and develop proposals. They also monitor the ongoing operation of projects, providing assistance as necessary. This Report, which covers the period 1 October 2021 to 30 September 2022, is presented by the Board to the Government of the United Kingdom, the Government of Ireland, the Northern Ireland Assembly and the Fund's donors in accordance with Article 12 of the Agreement of 18 September 1986, as amended, by which the International Fund for Ireland was established.

The Fund's Connecting Communities Strategy clusters around four key programmes, which include: Communities in Partnership, Peace Impact, Peace Barriers and Personal Youth Development. All programmes are characterised by:

- a clear focus on reconciliation as the overriding objective;
- a focus on community transformation rather than conflict management;
- an emphasis on engaging with individuals and communities that have not previously, or only partially, participated in peace building and community development activities;
- an independent and credible approach with strong international backing;
- a cross-community, cross-border approach;
- a willingness to take risks on behalf of local communities;
- early support for community initiatives;
- co-operation with other funders and leverage of funds from other sources;
- a willingness to innovate and to break new ground in support of reconciliation;
- a responsive approach to donor priorities.

COMMUNITIES IN PARTNERSHIP PROGRAMME

It has been clear for some time that Brexit is likely to have significant consequences for the island of Ireland. Borders are in danger of, once again, becoming a significant barrier, physically and psychologically, to harmonious relationships on these islands. The issues impacting border counties (north and south) are still evolving but it is likely they will represent significant challenges for Governments.

These issues pose the risk of individuals and communities becoming isolated and alienated. The IFI must continue to further its mission of encouraging contact and dialogue across this island. The IFI will work to ensure that the bonds of friendship, neighbourliness and partnership built over the past number of years continue to flourish.

Our Communities in Partnership Programme (CiPP) aims to embed cross-border co-operation. It seeks to build resilience in the face of uncertainty and friction, and support the development of local leadership.

In line with our strong belief that communities are best placed to design their own future, groups are encouraged to put forward initiatives that show innovation and creativity in addressing the challenges they face.

The first Projects under CiPP were approved at the June 2022 Board Meeting. Projects involved in the programme must meet two criteria; build genuine connections on a cross-border basis and provide meaningful benefit to the communities involved. These bring people together to serve their communities in imaginative ways such as:

- Using culture and the arts to create a space for people to deepen their understanding of the past and set a path for their future
- Launching initiatives that strengthen civic engagement thereby empowering communities to face difficult conversations and a path for their future
- Facilitating contact and discussion between diverse groups working on peace and reconciliation across the island
- Creating projects that engage and empower young people from both sides of the border
- Taking practical steps to improve people's social and material wellbeing
- Creating the conditions necessary for the development of social enterprise and innovation.

PEACE IMPACT PROGRAMME

The Peace Impact Programme (PIP) is designed to deliver real and positive community transformation through sensitive interventions in communities that have not previously, or have only partially, participated in peace building and reconciliation activities.

RIGHT: PIP projects planning a conference to build confidence and leadership within PUL communities.

The PIP programme places particular emphasis on engaging with disaffected communities, these projects are critical to building a truly integrated, shared and peaceful society. PIP works with communities to build sustainable peace and prosperity in areas suffering from high levels of economic and social deprivation, where there are low levels of engagement in peace building and where the Peace Process has delivered limited benefits.

The PIP programme strives to improve relationships and build cohesion between communities through creating the space for increased contact and dialogue, it supports projects to be more creative and innovative in their approach to dealing with contentious issues.

Launched in 2013, The Peace Impact Programme (PIP) has achieved significant success within communities where there has been limited or no previous participation in peace building activities.

In the last reporting year:

OUR AIM: To build sustainable peace and prosperity in areas suffering from high levels of economic and social deprivation, where there are low levels of engagement in peace building and where the Peace Process has delivered limited benefits.

SPERRIN CULTURAL AWARENESS ASSOCIATION (SCAA)

Sperrin Cultural Awareness Association (SCAA) developed a diversionary and support programme for young people in response to heightened unrest in the Loyalist community.

ABOVE: Young people involved in the Rangers mentorship Programme take part in a football tournament.

The programme was designed to build mechanisms to reduce or remove anti-social behaviour during the tense summer marching season.

SCAA partnered up with the Rangers Soccer Academy to engage young people in a new mentorship programme. The attraction of Rangers FC saw dozens aged from 11-17 years sign up to spend their Friday nights learning new skills rather than roaming the streets.

The Project is mainly funded through the IFI's Peace Impact Programme but received a further grant of £10k through the IFI'S Diversionary Funding initiative, which offers critical support for projects who need to provide further intervention. The 16-week project with Rangers has been a huge success with up to 90 young people taking part.

SCAA Development Manager Darren Richardson says: "It is easy for young people who are vulnerable or marginalised to be manipulated coming up to the parading season.

"Using the Rangers 'brand' we wanted to support and mentor them whilst challenging them in a respectful manner by delivering football activity and education through workshops to explore the causes and consequences of racism, sectarianism and anti-social behaviour.

"We have had different people in delivering workshops, including the PSNI and football referees. We've also provided life skills training and education.

"Around 50 young people travelled to Ibrox to see a Rangers match and then took part in diversity themed workshops in Scotland."

While the aim of the project was to prevent vulnerable young people being exploited during times of tension and uncertainty in the PUL community, it also set out to equip them with knowledge in good relations and citizenship as well as provide personal development to improve their employability.

SCAA has been working at the heart of Protestant Unionist Loyalist (PUL) communities since 2007 helping to resolve disputes related to parades, raise mutual understanding of cultural traditions, engage with marginalised young people and help develop the communities.

Originally set up in Magherafelt, it has continued to grow over the years and today has over 300 volunteers working in seven hubs throughout Mid Ulster, Antrim and Co. Londonderry.

Working on the ground, the group has built trust with local PUL communities including paramilitary groups and ex-prisoners.

That hard earned trust, together with strong partnerships with statutory bodies, including the PSNI has seen SCAA become the support group for mediation when tensions run high.

In the past year the charity has been dealing with increasing discontent created by the uncertainty of the NI Protocol and the increasing focus on Irish Unity.

Darren says: "There is a feeling of neglect in the PUL community, and many don't see positive leadership. Misinformation is always prevalent which has also heightened tensions.

"Our focus is to get the community to be proactive instead of reactive and using our considerable outreach programme we can help to deal with conflict and tensions very efficiently.

"We have spent a lot of time building structures with statutory bodies, working together with a common purpose which we see as more sustainable.

"It is not about throwing money at a problem but equipping people with the knowledge and ability to deal with it themselves.

"I would be known for not giving people 'a hand out' but I have a 'hand up' approach which involves addressing your needs and giving you the skills to provide that sustainability."

Peace building is at the heart of SCAA's work and it has also been successful in helping transform a Co. Antrim Eleventh Night bonfire in Randalstown, which was perceived as contentious, into a more welcoming and inclusive community cultural festival.

Partnering with Northern Ireland Alternatives, who also work with communities to establish restorative justice, they have established the first Mid Ulster Restorative Practice Centre.

Instead of an event marred by sectarian chants and anti-social behaviour, this year the bonfire became an inclusive community day of fun and celebration. It is a model that the charity hopes to roll out to other areas in the future.

The devastating impact of the cost-of-living crisis is not just being felt by the communities SCAA works with, but also by the charity itself.

"Some of our volunteers, especially in rural areas, have had to take on second jobs or work longer hours to make ends meet which means they don't have the time to devote to us. Some who work in rural areas can't afford the fuel costs to get to us.

"There is no doubt that people will suffer this winter and we are currently looking at how we can signpost people to get help and also provide whatever support we can."

COMMUNITY RESTORATIVE JUSTICE NEWRY AND ARMAGH (CRJ)

The cost-of-living crisis has been a big focus in rural South Armagh where isolation is once again adding to the challenges in community outreach work.

ABOVE: The project delivers activity in rural South Armagh in the border region.

Community Restorative Justice Newry and Armagh (CRJ) has been working hard to ensure that people are getting all of the Government support available to them. Transformative work has been going on through The Digging Deeper Project which has been funded by the IFI since 2014.

While food bank style 'pantries' have been springing up in towns across Northern Ireland in response to growing need, it is one of the challenges of this rural area that people don't have the advantage of being near to a town.

Project coordinator Mercedes Hunt explains: "The cost-of-living crisis has hit this area hard, and we've been working for a few months now to help people, mostly through welfare clinics to ensure they are getting any support they are entitled to.

"We've also been helping families to sort out school uniform and free school meal grants. Fuel poverty is a big issue because we are rural and people have to travel some distance to access services. Also, most people rely on home heating oil and are not connecting to the gas supply so they are not going to benefit from the price cap.

"Families have told us that to meet increasing costs they have been forced to reduce extra-curricular activities for their children because they can't afford them, or the travel costs involved. This has had a direct impact on mental health in young people post-pandemic."

CRJ has had a huge presence in the area since 1999 working across Newry, South Armagh and into the border communities. Once known as the most militarised area in Europe, the legacy of the conflict still causes barriers and difficulties for the communities here.

The Project has a strong focus on promoting peace and reconciliation, working closely with women, ex-prisoners, young adults and people who generally feel disengaged from their community, politics and the Peace Process.

Mercedes describes some of the unique challenges facing these rural border communities: "We can't ignore the fact that South Armagh is an area coming out of conflict, at one point it was the most militarised area in Europe.

"The legacy of the conflict still causes barriers and difficulties for people. The image of South Armagh in general is not a true reflection of the communities here. These outside perceptions cause a feeling of vilification which in turn decreases engagement with other communities and causes a lack of trust between people in the area and statutory agencies.

"Under investment from statutory and other funding bodies hits people financially and personally. The only consistent investment to peace in the region is through the IFI.

"People are also dealing with a lack of employment opportunities. Women with children find it difficult to maintain employment because of low childcare accessibility, combined with increasing travel costs, especially in rural areas. The communities are very close-knit and survive because of the strength of character of the people."

CRJ has been working with the communities on projects focused to bring people together and enable them to resolve some of the many issues affecting their quality of life.

Through the strong presence of the project, local people were able to contribute to the South Armagh Policing Review last year.

Over 500 members of the community engaged with the Review to express their views in the hope of bringing about change.

Mercedes says: "This was a huge achievement for Digging Deeper and shows that the community understands they are entitled to a certain level of service. It shows a shift in attitudes toward policing and access to a policing service.

TOP LEFT: Improving community engagement and understanding with those who feel disengaged is a core part of project delivery.

TOP RIGHT: The Project works hard to change negative perception and encourage more positive dialogue with statutory agencies.

"We followed this with an innovative and first-of-its-kind conference on cross border community safety and policing. One speaker Detective Superintendent John O'Flaherty raised the issue of how community safety apps and alerts are not collaborating on a cross-border basis.

"We were able to encourage members of the community who were somewhat disengaged to attend the conference and engage in the subject. This served as a platform to link some of the community members to academics and activists which enabled them to tell their stories and work together on moving forward."

Working closely with statutory agencies on behalf of the border communities, CRJ has also created a platform for these agencies to collaborate on meeting the specific needs of South Armagh.

Recently they have been helping give women a voice through a cross-border group focused on encouraging civic engagement on issues directly faced by women in the communities.

The work has been making a real difference to the individual lives of participants as well as allowing the women to have a positive impact on the communities they live in.

SWANLINBAR DEVELOPMENT ASSOCIATION (SDA)

Swanlinbar Development Association (SDA) is a powerful example of the transformative impact the IFI's Peace Impact Programme (PIP) can make on a small rural border community.

ABOVE: SDA works with all ages in the community and delivers a range of activities including a weekly dance class.

Moving away from being an area suffering from the impact of conflict over many years, Swanlinbar in West Cavan is developing into a thriving cross-border community with a sense of hope for major regeneration.

SDA has worked hard to promote the development of the village and surrounding areas and to help groups, young and old, to develop mutual respect, tolerance and understanding.

The IFI funded 'Finding our Way' Project, which works with all ages, is now based in SDA'S new Trivia House, a beautiful, big, old Georgian building, also originally funded by the IFI.

Renovation works were completed and a seven bed room hostel was officially opened March 26, 2022. This new base, which has been five years in the planning, provides a neutral community space which has been used for a range of activities over the past year.

The hostel welcomed its first guests in September 2021 who were visitors to The Cuilcagh Lakelands UNESCO Global Geopark. People have stayed at the hostel from as far away as Germany, demonstrating the positive economic impact that the hostel has brought to the village. In recent times, as a direct response to the war in Ukraine, the hostel is now a refuge for people fleeing that conflict.

Eighteen refugees from Ukraine arrived in May and a huge effort was made to help them settle in.

SDA Coordinator, Noel Maguire explains: "We have a couple of families with three generations, grandparents, parents and grandchildren. We have worked with other agencies to help them to register for social welfare, local doctors, dentists and schools.

'We provided translators, organised day trips and volunteer drivers to bring them to appointments. The local community donated clothes and we've helped them with different activities such as English classes, aerobics and baking.

"We have worked very closely with the local Church of Ireland, using their local parish hall to host IFI programmes and workshops along with activities for our Ukrainian visitors. It has been great to have been able to help."

The IFI project coordinator has supported the SDA to submit a number of successful applications for funding. This has enabled the hostel to take on four staff and it also secured finance for a village enhancement scheme.

The village suffered badly during the economic downturn with many businesses forced to close and their premises falling empty and into neglect. Finance has been secured for a village enhancement scheme which is now underway.

TOP RIGHT: Noel Maguire Finding Our Way Co-ordinator.

It will see the transformation of these downtrodden buildings in the heart of the village with 20 getting a new look, three murals created along with new art installations and window graphics.

Noel says so much more work has been achieved: "The IFI funding has strengthened the group's confidence and capacity to develop a social enterprise which was achieved in the opening of the hostel.

"We have also worked to build relationships across the border in Fermanagh, in particular within the PUL community.

"It has been challenging, but slowly we have managed to engage participants and built strong relationships locally with the Church of Ireland community, West End Community in Enniskillen and the wider Cleenish Community, during difficult times with Brexit and Covid 19 pandemic."

This included a scheme with two primary schools from both communities, Florencecourt Primary School in Co Fermanagh and Swanlinbar National School, where friendships have been developed among the children.

A successful soccer summer camp facilitated by FAI coaches gave young people from both communities the chance to learn new skills and build friendships with each other.

Cross-border cross-community women's and men's groups also built strong relationships and were able to tackle difficult conversations in a respectful manner.

The border communities have had challenges with Brexit and the NI Protocol which the Association has also been working hard to tackle.

"With no NI Protocol in place and the Stormont Government not sitting, people are worried about the future and what might happen. There are concerns that a border frontier might be re-introduced to replace the Irish Sea Border and there are fears that could mean custom checkpoints around Swanlinbar.

"For local people that loss of free movement could have a severe economic impact on cross-border trade locally as well as on tourism on Cuilcagh Mountain and on the hostel."

The cost-of-living crisis has also been a major concern.

Being a rural area extra transport costs for people, accessibility to services and ability to shop around for best value have all added to the daily pressures facing the community.

Noel adds: "People are really concerned about the impact of the cost of living as everything is nearly doubling in price but wages are static.

"With very little or no public transport, running a car is now a massive expense but essential for people to get to work. Home heating oil and food prices are increasing every week and inflation continues to rise.

"We are working with voluntary and statutory agencies to provide support for anyone struggling at the moment, signposting people and ensuring they are getting all the financial help available to them."

Tony McGovern, Chair of Swanlinbar Development Association concludes by speaking of the enduring legacy of the International Fund and the massive difference it has made at a grass roots level.

"The International Fund for Ireland supported us and this border community at a very difficult time; they placed their trust in us and they provided a platform that gave us the confidence to invest in our future."

PEACE BARRIERS PROGRAMME

Peace Walls are the most visual remaining symbols of division in Northern Ireland. Today, more than 100 barriers remain mostly in Belfast stretching a distance of 21km.

RIGHT: The transformation of a harsh Peace Wall on North Queen Street in Belfast has improved residents lives. They now have gardens and can access their house via the front door.

The Peace Barriers Programme (formerly known as Peace Walls Programme) was launched in January 2012. It focuses on helping interface communities to bring about the conditions that can allow for the removal of Peace Walls.

It provides a range of confidence and relationship building initiatives within and between interface communities to help residents arrive at a position where they feel it is safe and appropriate to discuss and consider the removal of Peace Walls in their area. The programme is designed for communities that have expressed their willingness and readiness to begin building the levels of trust required before starting the process of engaging with statutory authorities about removing the barriers. The programme, which was developed by the Fund following consultation with all the key stakeholders, is designed to be the first stage in a process leading to the physical removal of barriers. This includes assisting interface communities to lever financial and political investment from statutory authorities for any associated infrastructure and community regeneration needs when the barriers are removed.

22 YEARS

In the past reporting year our Peace Barriers Programme has delivered:

OUR AIM: To develop and deliver a range of confidence and relationship building interventions within and between communities to help residents reach a position where they feel it is safe and appropriate to proceed with the removal of peace barriers in their area.

GREATER WHITEWELL COMMUNITY SURGERY (GWCS)

Working in the Greencastle and Whitewell areas in the north of the city, the group has already brought down significant physical barriers as well as overcoming emotional blocks which for years have kept communities apart.

Promoting good community relations, religious and racial harmony, plus equality and diversity is at the heart of the Surgery's work.

The benefits which flow from their efforts have been huge with both sides taking part in cross-community programmes helping to advance conflict resolution and reconciliation and also raising cultural awareness within and between communities in the area.

On the ground people feel more comfortable to move freely between each other's communities and there has been less flags erected in the area.

Greater Whitewell Community Surgery (GWCS) has been funded by the IFI Peace Barriers Programme since 2012. The aim is to develop and deliver a range of confidence and relationship building interventions within and between interface communities to help residents feel it is safe and appropriate to remove interfaces in their area.

Where Peace Walls once kept the two communities apart, now thanks to the work of GWCS, shared spaces bring them together.

However, it is highly sensitive work which involves ongoing good relations with many statutory bodies, Government and most importantly, the communities affected.

GWCS Project Manager Geraldine O'Kane explains: "It is all about getting people to talk and we have ongoing programmes for all age groups from three years up to 18, as well as a senior's group, a men's group, a women's group and a young women's group. They are all involved in ongoing discussions around peace building and barrier removal."

Without a community hub – something the GWCS is lobbying hard for – their good work can often be limited, due to something as simple as a room for meetings not being readily available. This hinders the opportunity to unite groups and keep momentum going.

Geraldine says: "Throughout the year, we have had to have many structural repairs to our premises and accept that it constrains many activities due to its layout. We don't have room to host our groups or programmes and have to try and get space elsewhere.

"We have engaged with Apex Housing Association and other agencies on a project at Ballygolan with the hope of establishing a new community facility that would be leased to GWCS as part of a new housing scheme there.

"Plans have been prepared and negotiations are ongoing. We see it as a shared community hub which no one takes ownership of, so it won't be a case of this is 'ours' or 'yours'.

"It would make a massive difference to our work.

"At the minute our programmes run in church halls or the local chapel hall, wherever we can find space. Often that requires weeks of notice beforehand which means often the momentum is gone.

"If we had our own rooms to run our programmes it would be so much easier."

The past year has also seen significant advancement in reaching people previously resistant to or unsure of what it would mean to take down the Peace Barriers beside them.

Geraldine explains: "Sometimes it can be just one person who is not on board and that can halt progress.

"This year we worked with a larger group of women who were originally reluctant to engage with us but are now in discussions on the Peace Barriers. We have now successfully negotiated that the Peace Wall gate at Serpentine Road/Navarra Place remains open to allow freedom of movement between communities for the first time.

"Some of the residents are now in agreement that the school fence at Hazelwood Primary School needs to be discussed with us at length. It is good to now see supportive attitudes.

"Our Community Development worker has successfully interviewed one resident on their attitudinal journey from a negative to a positive response on the Serpentine/Navarra barrier. This will help us to better approach negotiations at the remaining Peace Barriers."

In an area of high deprivation, the group has found itself at the very centre of the cost-of-living crisis. Phone calls asking for help with food, electricity and heating bills are now a daily occurrence.

Geraldine says: "People are terrified, they are sitting without gas or heating and it's not even really cold yet.

"They then are risking health problems with damp in their homes.

"Even families who are working and single parents who are on 16-hour contracts are struggling to pay bills. We have a lot of pensioners who can't afford to put their heat on. It is heart breaking. We are working with St Vincent De Paul and the food banks to do what we can to help those most in need.

"We are also running a weekly advice centre to support people to access any help that is available to them.

"People are already starting to despair about Christmas. We have young families who can't even think about paying for Christmas dinner never mind buying toys for their children. We are already preparing to provide food packs to the most in need over Christmas."

In the year ahead the group will continue its good work on delivering inter-community cultural and educational programmes for all ages as well as continue its relationship with outside agencies towards removal of the remaining Peace Walls in the area.

BOGSIDE AND BRANDYWELL INITIATIVE (BBI)

Dozens of women from across the divide in Derry/Londonderry have found friendships, new skills and healing through a series of projects that grew out of lockdown.

What began as a simple way of reaching out to isolated women during the pandemic has snowballed into a series of peace building projects led by the IFI-funded Bogside and Brandywell Initiative (BBI).

'Women, Words and Walls' has become a huge initiative which has spawned a video, a poignant new display on the Bishop Street Peace Wall, a stage play and a new Hens' Shed – a social hub bringing women from different communities together regularly for company and new activities.

BBI's Project Worker Rachel Mullan-Carlin explains how it all began: "Through delivering food parcels during lockdown we discovered some women were alone and very isolated.

"We started a weekly two-hour Zoom meeting every Thursday night to provide some social interaction and initially it was only for six weeks but it was so successful that it went on for 12 weeks.

"At first the women just talked about themselves and their lives but very soon they started to open up to discuss their experiences of the conflict. The facilitator of the Zoom calls recorded the conversations and put together a video which proved very powerful.

"We then got some of the women's quotes and put them on banners and boards which have gone onto the Bishop Street Fountain interface wall.

"In our experience getting people to open up and talk about the conflict requires a soft and gradual approach and it can take a long time of building up friendships and trust before they feel able to open up.

"The women on the Zoom calls felt comfortable with each other very quickly and talked about very personal stuff. Some of them had family members killed in the Troubles. It became almost like a group therapy session and there were tears sometimes as well."

From an initial group of around 12 women on Zoom, once restrictions lifted and they were able to come together in person, numbers quickly grew.

BBI developed writing workshops so that they could continue to build on the sharing of personal narratives and hard-hitting inter-community dialogue.

A Hens' Shed was also started to encourage others to get together. This new cross-community hub is now a thriving centre offering a range of programmes for over 120 women from a weekly walking group to yoga sessions and training workshops.

Members of the writing group, in conjunction with playwright Anne McMaster, penned a play entitled 'This is Us' which they then performed for members of the new Hens' Shed.

Kyra Reynolds, BBI Development Worker says: "The women were extremely nervous to begin with but they felt that their play and their words were being listened to and they really enjoyed it.

"We are now running an 'Epilogues' project as part of a follow up to the writing group, listening to various perspectives on the Troubles.

"Women who started at the beginning on the Zoom calls are now leaders for the new ones joining. It has been a very powerful experience for everyone taking part. Once the women break the barrier and start to talk about their experiences, you can see their confidence grow.

"It is almost like once they have gotten their story out it is a relief, like something they have been holding onto for a long time has suddenly been released.

"Epilogues provides women from different communities with the chance to share their experiences and listen to each other's opinions."

BBI's reach in community development is extensive and they have also been reacting to the cost-of-living crisis.

A 'social supermarket' has been set up in response to the struggles facing families with advice on benefits, mental health support, food parcels and practical help with energy bills.

TOP LEFT: A 'Women, Words and Walls' display takes pride of place on the Bishop Street Peace Wall.

Based in a neighbourhood ranked among the top 10% most deprived in Northern Ireland, BBI works closely with other organisations and statutory bodies to help empower people both socially and economically.

Activities include community engagement, environmental improvement, community safety, and enabling local people to influence policy and decision makers, sustaining active citizens and improving facilities.

Environmental improvement has seen locals take pride in the appearance of their communities through the establishment of Tús Maith/Fresh Start (TM/FS).

TM/FS provides services such as grass cutting, gutter cleaning and rubbish removal at affordable prices while also providing training and employment for those carrying out the services.

A team also carries out workshops on the importance of protecting the environment in local schools.

Kyra adds: "BBI recognises that there is a strong correlation between socio-economic issues and intercommunity tension. We work to provide opportunities to everyone regardless of their cultural background, and to encourage cross-community working on shared issues, like that of the environment."

BLACK MOUNTAIN SHARED SPACE PROJECT (BMSSP)

People said it couldn't be done but in what was a major building block for reconciliation, two of Belfast's most polarised communities came together on the peace lines for Christmas 2021.

ABOVE: Work begins to dismantle a long standing Peace Wall in the Springmartin area of West Belfast.

Black Mountain Shared Space Project (BMSSP) ensured the peace barriers remained open so that the two sides could mix at a community Christmas market. The day long event saw Protestants and Catholics cross the divide to enjoy festive shopping at stalls set up by groups, charities and individuals from each community.

BMSSP Project Manager Seamus Corr explains just how significant the event was for the area: "This is something we have wanted to do since 2013 and we were always told it wouldn't happen.

"We agreed the gates at the Peace Walls at Springfield Road and Springmartin needed to remain open for the event and had about 20 stalls provided by community organisations from both communities.

"It was extremely successful. We didn't count numbers but estimate that around 1000 people from both communities came, the majority of those attending were families with plenty of children enjoying themselves.

"It basically created an environment where both communities could put politics behind them and come together into a shared space.

"We had simple things like Santa's grotto and stalls created by local football teams and charities. Members of our woman's group had a bakery stall and the local Men's Shed brought things they had made.

"For us there aren't enough opportunities like that, and we plan to do it again this year even bigger and better."

Shared space is so crucial to uniting the divided communities of West Belfast that BMSSP has been working hard to make it a reality for the past 13 years.

The IFI has helped BMSSP with its vision for a new hub to serve both communities. Located at a flashpoint site between Ballygomartin and the Springmartin Road, it will be a welcoming, safe and accessible state-of-the-art building used to deliver cross-community programming.

On course for opening in December 2023, spirally building costs saw the project temporarily stalled this summer but thanks to a considerable effort by BMSSP and local political representatives additional funding was secured, and work is once again progressing.

BMSSP was set up in 2009 and is a cross-community partnership working to build relationships with people living on both sides of the Peace Wall in West Belfast. The group has achieved this through multiple community-based initiatives many of which have been funded by the IFI since 2013.

LEFT: An artist impression of how the new shared community hub will look, which is due to open in late 2023.

It is sensitive work, but BMSSP has reached some of the most vulnerable members of the communities in terms of conflict, legacy and poverty.

As a result, hundreds of people have crossed the peace line for the first time.

Current political issues such as the NI Protocol, talk of a border poll and a potential election in 2023 election all have impacted on the stability within the communities in recent months.

As well as its ongoing programmes, it falls to BMSSP to step in and calm tensions which can boil over often in these politically sensitive communities.

Seamus says: "In recent years, we have been involved in critical engagement around political topics with both communities. From the burning of buses and unrest around the NI Protocol in May 2021 to Irish signage being erected in a mixed area in June 2022, we worked hard behind the scenes to negotiate and help find solutions to issues affecting communities."

Another focus has been the men's critical engagement group funded by the IFI which has now entered phase three. Bringing together ex-prisoners and former combatants from both sides to discuss each other's views on the conflict has been a challenge in itself. However, with perseverance it has been a huge success.

"We have continued to develop the project as it has progressed. We found that getting men together weekly for challenging conversations was too much, so now every fortnight we do a walk and talk when they can reflect on the previous week's discussions.

"It has been extremely successful and recently we had an ex-Loyalist and ex-Republican prisoner and a former British Army soldier in the room giving a narrative on their role during The Troubles and how they see things in the future.

"People are having conversations with those they would have considered their enemies and whose views and opinions they would previously have been extremely hostile towards.

"Everything is on the table and everything can be discussed and worked through."

A similar scheme for young men aged 18-21 years has just got underway with the focus on engaging youth from both sides in outdoor pursuit activities followed by evening discussions led by BMSSP leaders.

Another huge achievement of the past year has been the recent completion of the Moyard development at Upper Springfield Road. A former rundown play park at an interface on the peace line, it had for years been a flashpoint for rival youths. After 10 years in the planning the finishing touches are now being put to a new development of much need social housing for the area.

PERSONAL YOUTH DEVELOPMENT PROGRAMME

The programme aims to help at risk young people build and develop life skills that foster good relations, build confidence and resilience and make them more employable. The programme is unique in the way it engages and sustains contact with participants.

Each PYDP project builds enduring relationships with young people and establishes highly personalised development plans tailored to the needs of the individual. The tiered nature of the programme and continued contact with project coordinators – even after completion of initial level – means participants can progress or reconnect with the programme at different levels as circumstances change. In this sense, the programme adapts and adjusts to the needs of the individual providing personal guidance and encouragement as they develop. The PYDP seeks to connect young people aged 16-25 to personalised learning, skills and employment opportunities with a central focus on good relations and preparing young people for the world of work. It is interested in engaging young people that are vulnerable to polarisation/recruitment to organisations opposed to the Peace Process and face barriers to participation in mainstream provision.

The Personal Youth Development Programme (PYDP) enables each participant to take control of their own personal development through a multitiered approach that offers significant individualised support with community, social and economic elements.

Launched in November 2015, the Personal Youth Development Programme (PYDP) is designed to help young people build and develop life skills that foster good relations, build confidence and resilience and make them more employable.

In the last reporting year:

OUR AIM: Helping at risk young people build and develop life skills that foster good relations, build confidence and resilience and make them more employable.

SPRINGBOARD OPPORTUNITIES 'DIRECTIONS'

In the heart of Belfast, yards from a peace gate separating the Falls Road from the Shankill Road, a group of young people bravely took to the stage for a powerful performance showcasing the life-changing impact of a project funded by the IFI's Personal Youth Development Programme (PYDP).

'Directions', which is facilitated by Springboard Opportunities, has already led to fundamental improvements in the lives of 16 participants.

In August, the young people used the medium of art to put on a performance which they called 'Our Lives Our Legacy' to show just how far they have come in a year.

Recorded video footage gave the audience a sense of the harsh reality of how The Troubles have impacted on the lives of these young people and their communities.

More than 60 people, including many stakeholders, then listened as one after another, the youths took to the stage to talk about the barriers and issues they have come up against.

Many of the young people come from complex backgrounds and carry significant trauma which is expressed through challenging behaviours. Some had struggled with mental health and expressed a vulnerability to paramilitary or criminal activity while all came to the project with no training or education and negative views of their future.

Participants shared the positive legacy they want to convey to future generations through the showcase, displaying an art piece representative of their development to date but more importantly it symbolised the power of what can be done when young people have a space to come together.

Directions has successfully created a space for participants to focus on personal development and good relations; citizenship and employability. Throughout this time they have participated in workshops which have explored bespoke informal training and accreditations.

Consequently 16 young people have completed Open College Network (OCN) in Personal Success and Wellbeing, Good Relations and nine have completed an OCN in Youth and Community work.

The Project didn't shy away from tackling key issues that had held the young people back from progressing in their lives.

Directions Project Coordinator, Sam McCaw explains: "We brought together young people from differing communities, some of whom had been involved with paramilitaries and even have had death threats.

"They all reside in segregated communities and one of the things we recognise is that the legacy of The Troubles continues to impact many communities. It's important that we put discussions around identity, ongoing impact and trauma at the forefront to enable meaningful peace and reconciliation.

"In doing so we weren't afraid to address the elephant in the room and help them to realise the benefits of a shared society and a shared future.

"We had two young mothers from different communities who we paired from the start as they had so much in common. One of them came from a family ingrained in paramilitaries and had never spoken to a Protestant before.

"From the very start they began to meet up with their children and formed a really strong friendship which we have no doubt they will maintain beyond the project.

"As a result of Directions, the young people now have an increased level of self-confidence, emotional resilience and have explored how they can contribute positively to their local communities with the skills they have acquired."

For the Springboard team it has been a privilege to see the young people's journey through Directions.

Not only has it helped 16 young people from across Belfast to build strong sustainable relationships with one another but this in turn has impacted positively on their families and communities.

LEFT: A summer day trip for the project.

Looking to the future, Sam adds: "Progressing into year two we want them to develop a sense of autonomy so that they are equipped to go on to find themselves work or go into education or training when the project is over.

"The transformation so far in seeing these young people overcome personal trauma to look towards a new future has been amazing. PYDP projects are instrumental in creating a space where young people from divided communities can come together to work on themselves and create a shared future."

CREGGAN ENTERPRISES 'LIFEHACK'

In just five years, the Derry-based 'Lifehack' Project has emerged as a model for how best to help marginalised youths to turn their lives around.

ABOVE: Young people from the project take part in water sports activity.

It is much-deserved recognition for the dedicated team at Creggan Enterprises who from day one set out to tailor support to the very individual needs of each participant.

The IFI funds Lifehack through its Personal Youth Development Programme (PYDP). It includes developing good relations between communities, promoting personal and social development as well as employment skills.

And while all of the above are helping to transform the lives of the 16–25-year-olds taking part, it is the very human approach by project coordinator Richie McRory and his team which is really helping to produce results.

Richie says: "We find that every young person who comes through the door will have significant challenges of their own. We try and tailor our approach to meet the needs of the individual.

"That might mean one-to-one help before the young person has the confidence to go into a group setting. We offer this as mentoring support and some of the youth might need additional help and we will signpost them to other services.

"Most will have dropped out of school and unemployment is massive. These young people have huge issues including mental health, self-harm, suicidal thoughts and substance use. We've worked with young people who have become parents in their teens, who have been sexually exploited or are under threat or have been excluded from their community.

"Often it is about building confidence first. Most are from areas where their parents experienced high levels of deprivation and the young people tend to bear the brunt of that.

"One of the hardest things is the hopelessness that a lot of them seem to feel. They come into the project with no aspirations or anything to look forward to. That can be really hard to deal with but it makes sense as their families didn't have a lot of hope as there is a lack of opportunity in their communities."

Once the young person has been mentored to a place where they feel they can fully participate, they are then put through a robust programme of self-development.

Lifehack primarily encourages each participant to make improved life choices.

This is done through a mix of accredited and non-accredited training alongside good relations workshops, team building exercises, creative technology projects and activities that focus on improving confidence, self-esteem and employability.

Based on the first floor of the Rath Mor Centre in Creggan, the project has become the go-to place for disaffected youth who often self-refer as well as referrals from outside agencies and statutory bodies.

For this reason, course numbers consistently far exceed those initially projected as Lifehack's reputation for success spreads.

To date over 130 youths have completed the project, with 27 currently taking part.

The results are impressive. Statistics since April 2021 show that 46 young people completed good relations training, 47 took part in employment training, 29 walked away with accredited training, 17 embarked on work experience, while 12 went back to education, 23 secured full or part-time employment and one embarked on an apprenticeship.

Richie says: "Young people are getting chances here that they are not getting anywhere else. The change in them is massive and it has been life changing for most of them.

"We had one young woman who came in at 24 years old who couldn't take a bus or queue in a supermarket due to social phobias and anxiety. She completed a range of courses and received robust 1-1 support. She now volunteers in a local charity shop giving back to her community."

Looking forward to building on the success they have already achieved which has included working across both communities in Derry, Richie would like to see Lifehack rolled out as a model to other areas of need.

He adds: "Getting the funding from the IFI has helped us to grow and develop the project to what it is today. There is a lot of negative influence in the communities affecting young people.

"This is exacerbated by generational disadvantage and exclusion in the North West and failed economic development policies are a major factor, alongside intergenerational trauma.

"Sustainability is key and growing the project and promoting it as the best model and supporting other groups to establish that model is how we see the future."

INISHOWEN DEVELOPMENT PARTNERSHIP (IDP)

In what is one of the most isolated, peripheral and rural communities along the border, Inishowen Development Partnership (IDP) is reaching and supporting young people “at risk”.

As part of the IFI's Personal Youth Development programme, IDP has just recruited for its second CHANCE project – Creating Hope and Aspiration, Nurturing Change and Empowerment.

While based in Buncrana, this powerful project supports young people from across the Inishowen peninsula, an extensively rural area.

Due to geography and history, Inishowen as a peninsula, sits apart as a region within Donegal.

As a peripheral community area, it is designated as one of the most isolated and disadvantaged regions within the southern border counties.

Shauna McClenaghan Joint Chief Executive Officer says: “In an area like Inishowen, the ‘opportunity horizon’ for young people who are not in employment, education or training, is actually more likely to be in the wider ‘North West City Region’, which takes in a broader catchment than Donegal.

“This means that a ‘regional approach’ and a ‘cross-border’ focus are important in the context of exploring the opportunities that might be available to young people.

“Having this focus is also very important in the context of good relations work. People living in communities in Inishowen, for example, feel very much connected to the regional city on their doorstep.’

CHANCE first operated in 2018 with exceptional results. This latest phase began in earnest in April and will run for two years.

It is aimed at youth aged between 16 and 25 years and so far, IDP has engaged with and supported an additional nine participants this year with the hope of supporting adding more young people as time progresses.

“These are young people who have fallen through the cracks. Most will have left school with no qualifications and currently are not in training or employment. Many have mental health problems, addiction issues and some might be in trouble with the law. We are dealing with a whole gambit of issues.

“They are young people with no focus and no hope and the ones who are forgotten about and it's about giving them another chance.”

TOP RIGHT: Andrea McLaughlin, completing an apprenticeship as a mechanic in Letterkenny.

To properly meet the individual needs of each participant CHANCE has been designed as a bespoke project.

Each individual will have their own personal development plan drawn up to suit their area of interest.

Initially, participants will benefit from a sensitive one-to-one mentoring approach, designed to identify any additional support they might need.

They then will engage with each other in group settings as well as taking part in a number of programmes run by the organisation including nutrition training, barista classes, personal fitness and ICT.

Shauna says: "It is a big journey for the young people and we get them to the point where they are looking at the road ahead and can see a future for themselves. When we get them into a group of their peers, they will do team building work and good relations training."

The Inishowen Peninsula, where the project is based, has had the added pressure in recent years of dealing with the "Mica" controversy.

Thousands of homes privately bought by families in the area are crumbling due to defective blocks that contain high levels of deleterious minerals which can absorb water and cause cracking to external and internal walls.

"People are living in crumbling homes and it is having a huge effect on families who are suffering mental health issues. This pressure transfers over to some young people. Living in defective homes has become a huge burden for families in our area. Some people are living with scaffolding inside their homes to hold the walls up. It affects so many people."

Added to this is the cost-of-living crisis which is being felt directly by so many young people.

Very much in its early stages, this next phase hopes to build on the success of the first CHANCE project.

Shauna adds: "It was a major success. We had 21 young people benefit from the first CHANCE project and between them 142 accreditations were achieved. We had 12 who went on work placements, three to third level education and 11 got jobs.

"We would just like to thank the IFI for the opportunity to work with these young people. We are very grateful as it is a really worthwhile project."

AMBIT

The popular AMBIT (American Management and Business Internship Training) Programme has been successfully running for over 20 years. It is an annual outreach and capacity building initiative in the United States funded by the IFI, facilitated by the US consulate in Belfast and managed by the Washington Ireland Program (WIP).

ABOVE: AMBIT participant Adam Corner, PSNI Area Commander, South Armagh speaking at an event in Ballinamore, Leitrim.

It develops partnerships and encourages collaboration to support individual development as well as create an awareness of the IFI's work at a local and international level.

Individuals from Northern Ireland and the southern border counties, from a range of professional and community sector backgrounds, apply to take part. Many of those involved work with at-risk young people and in communities that continue to live with the legacy of The Troubles.

In March 2022, the AMBIT team visited El Paso, Texas before travelling on to Washington DC. Throughout the trip, collaboration was encouraged, and discussion themes included trauma, shared identities & the coexistence of multiple identities in divided societies.

This year, an unlikely friendship formed between two participants who soon found common ground in shared experiences of the Border region. AMBIT was the perfect opportunity to encourage positive dialogue around border communities.

Adam Corner is a PSNI Area Commander in South Armagh. He recently spoke at the launch of a county Leitrim PIP project in Ballinamore called 'Better Together – Níos Fearr Le Chéile'. The invitation came through fellow AMBIT participant, Máirín Martin, Chairperson, Ballinamore Area Community Council.

Until recently, it would have been impossible for a PSNI officer to attend an event in this area due to safety concerns. The launch was particularly significant as it marked the first time a PSNI officer spoke in an official capacity at a public function in Ballinamore.

"I met Máirín during this year's AMBIT trip. She spoke passionately about her work in county Leitrim and her own experience growing up along the border, back when it was a lot different to today.

"During the trip we visited the Texas / Mexico border known as 'the scar'. It's an ugly and visible militarised border that stretches for miles – not even at the height of the conflict here was such infrastructure needed."

Adam's role involves working with polarised communities in South Armagh in a more progressive way, which he hopes will continue to build trust and reassure residents that the PSNI is there to help.

"I am engaging in a border area, dealing with a legacy of hurt to deliver a type of policing people haven't had before but deserve to receive. It's progressive and it's a difficult path which needs to be walked down with caution.

"Our work with other experienced professionals including An Garda Síochána shows how we can use information and collaborative working to police the border effectively around similar, shared issues such as organised crime and smuggling without the need for physical barriers.

He adds; "My AMBIT journey and knowledge of dealing with difficult issues along the border reminds me that everyone's lived experience is different, not everyone moves at the same pace when it comes to reconciliation, and we must all have an openness and willingness to understand.

Máirín believes that the AMBIT experience is vital for community workers as peace remains fragile on the island of Ireland.

"I was honoured to participate in this year's AMBIT programme and have made friends for life. Initially, I was very nervous, but Adam introduced himself and we soon learnt we had much in common. During our time in El Paso and Washington DC, Adam and I got the opportunity to engage in honest conversations around The Troubles. I admitted to Adam that I would never have had a conversation with a policeman in the six counties whilst growing up.

"We learned much from each other in a short period of time. The US groups we visited had amazing similarities to our own. Issues with borders, check points, the Walls, and problems they created for residents either side in El Paso brought back bad border memories and how far we have come. We must make sure we never return to the past but there are also walls that need to come down."

Since AMBIT Máirín has visited projects on the Shankill Road in Belfast and plans to visit Derry too. Her Better Together project has a strong cross-border and cross-community focus, and she hopes that Adam will play a role in its future development.

"One part of the Project is 'Exploring the Past and Looking to the Future'. This will include a series of workshops and discussions around shared approaches to community engagement. We hope to involve Adam and another AMBIT participant to participate in future discussions.

"AMBIT built my self-confidence and made me aware that I have a lot to offer in peace building and I plan to continue this through my own work in Ballinamore."

These summarised financial statements may not contain sufficient information to allow for a full understanding of the financial affairs of the International Fund for Ireland ("Fund") because they do not reflect the performance of the venture capital companies, which are wholly owned subsidiaries of the Fund. For further information the full annual financial statements, the auditors' report on those financial statements and the Board Members' annual report should be consulted; copies of these can be obtained from The International Fund for Ireland at either 28-32 Alfred Street, Belfast BT2 8EN or PO Box 2000, Dublin 2.

Statement of Board Members' responsibilities in respect of the Annual Report and the financial statements

The Board Members are responsible for preparing the financial statements for each financial year which give a true and fair view of the state of affairs of the International Fund for Ireland ("the Fund") and of the surplus or deficit of the Fund for that period. In fulfilling that responsibility, they have decided to prepare the financial statements in accordance with accounting standards issued by the Financial Reporting Council applicable in the United Kingdom and Republic of Ireland.

In preparing those financial statements, the Board Members have:

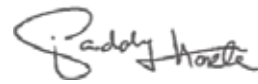

- selected suitable accounting policies and then apply them consistently;
- made judgements and estimates that are reasonable and prudent;
- stated whether applicable accounting standards have been followed, subject to any material departures disclosed and explained in the financial statements; and
- prepared the financial statements on the going concern basis, unless it is inappropriate to presume that the Fund will continue in business.

The Board Members confirm that they have complied with the above requirements in preparing the financial statements.

The Board Members are responsible for keeping proper accounting records which disclose with reasonable accuracy at any time the financial position of the Fund and enable them to ensure that the financial statements comply with best practice. They are also responsible for safeguarding the assets of the Fund and hence for taking reasonable steps for the prevention and detection of fraud and other irregularities.

The Board Members are responsible for the maintenance and integrity of the Fund's website. Legislation in the United Kingdom and Ireland governing the preparation and dissemination of financial statements may differ from legislation in other jurisdictions.

Independent auditors' report to the members of International Fund for Ireland

Report on the audit of the financial statements

Opinion

We have audited the financial statements of the International Fund for Ireland (the "Fund") for the year ended 30 September 2022 which comprise: the income and expenditure account; the statement of total recognised gains and losses; the balance sheet as at 30 September 2022; the cash flow statement; the accounting policies; and the notes to the financial statements. The financial reporting framework that has been applied in their preparation is applicable law and United Kingdom Accounting Standards, including FRS 102 The Financial Reporting Standard applicable in the UK and Republic of Ireland (United Kingdom Generally Accepted Accounting Practice).

In our opinion, the financial statements:

- give a true and fair view of the state of the charitable company's affairs as at 30 September 2022 and of its incoming resources and application of resources, for the year then ended;
- have been properly prepared in accordance with United Kingdom Generally Accepted Accounting Practice; and

Basis for opinion

We conducted our audit in accordance with International Standards on Auditing (UK) (ISAs (UK)) and applicable law. Our responsibilities under those standards are further described in the Auditor's responsibilities for the audit of the financial statements section of our report. We are independent of the Fund in accordance with the ethical requirements that are relevant to our audit of the financial statements in the UK, including the FRC's Ethical Standard, and we have fulfilled our other ethical responsibilities in accordance with these requirements. We believe that the audit evidence we have obtained is sufficient and appropriate to provide a basis for our opinion.

Conclusions relating to going concern

In auditing the financial statements, we have concluded that the Boards' use of the going concern basis of accounting in the preparation of the financial statements is appropriate.

Based on the work we have performed, we have not identified any material uncertainties relating to events or conditions that, individually or collectively, may cast significant doubt on the company's ability to continue as a going concern for a period of at least twelve months from when the financial statements are authorised for issue.

Our responsibilities and the responsibilities of the trustees with respect to going concern are described in the relevant sections of this report.

Other information

The Board Members are responsible for the other information. The other information comprises the information included in the Annual Report, other than the financial statements and our auditor's report thereon. Our opinion on the financial statements does not cover the other information and, except to the extent otherwise explicitly stated in our report, we do not express any form of assurance conclusion thereon.

In connection with our audit of the financial statements, our responsibility is to read the other information and, in doing so, consider whether the other information is materially inconsistent with the financial statements or our knowledge obtained in the audit or otherwise appears to be materially misstated. If we identify such material inconsistencies or apparent material misstatements, we are required to determine whether there is a material misstatement in the financial statements or a material misstatement of the other information. If, based on the work we have performed, we conclude that there is a material misstatement of this other information, we are required to report that fact.

We have nothing to report in this regard.

Opinion on other information

In our opinion, based on the work undertaken in the course of our audit:

- the information given in the Board Members' report and governance statement for the financial year for which the financial statements are prepared is consistent with the financial statements; and
- the Board Members' report and governance statement have been prepared in accordance with applicable legal requirements.

Other required reporting

We conducted our audit in accordance with ISAs (UK & Ireland). An audit involves obtaining evidence about the amounts and disclosures in the financial statements sufficient to give reasonable assurance that the financial statements are free from material misstatement, whether caused by fraud or error.

This includes an assessment of:

- whether the accounting policies are appropriate to the Fund's circumstances and have been consistently applied and adequately disclosed;
- the reasonableness of significant accounting estimates made by the Board Members'; and
- the overall presentation of the financial statements.

We primarily focus our work in these areas by assessing the Board Members' judgements against available evidence, forming our own judgements, and evaluating the disclosures in the financial statements.

We test and examine information, using sampling and other auditing techniques, to the extent we consider necessary to provide a reasonable basis for us to draw conclusions. We obtain audit evidence through testing the effectiveness of controls, substantive procedures or a combination of both.

In addition, we read all the financial and non-financial information in the Annual Report to identify material inconsistencies with the audited financial statements and to identify any information that is apparently materially incorrect based on, or materially inconsistent with, the knowledge acquired by us in the course of performing the audit. If we become aware of any apparent material misstatements or inconsistencies we consider the implications for our report.

Responsibilities of Board Members

As explained more fully in the Board Members' report, the Board Members are responsible for the preparation of the financial statements and for being satisfied that they give a true and fair view, and for such internal control as the Board Members determine is necessary to enable the preparation of financial statements that are free from material misstatement, whether due to fraud or error.

In preparing the financial statements, the Board Members are responsible for assessing Fund's ability to continue as a going concern, disclosing, as applicable, matters related to going concern and using the going concern basis of accounting unless the Board Members either intend to liquidate Fund or to cease operations, or have no realistic alternative but to do so.

Auditor's responsibilities for the audit of the financial statements

Our objectives are to obtain reasonable assurance about whether the financial statements as a whole are free from material misstatement, whether due to fraud or error, and to issue an auditor's report that includes our opinion. Reasonable assurance is a high level of assurance, but is not a guarantee that an audit conducted in accordance with ISAs (UK) will always detect a material misstatement when it exists. Misstatements can arise from fraud or error and are considered material if, individually or in the aggregate, they could reasonably be expected to influence the economic decisions of users taken on the basis of these financial statements.

Irregularities, including fraud, are instances of non-compliance with laws and regulations. We design procedures in line with our responsibilities, outlined above, to detect material misstatements in respect of irregularities, including fraud. The extent to which our procedures are capable of detecting irregularities, including fraud is detailed over.

Explanation as to what extent the audit was considered capable of detecting irregularities, including fraud

The objectives of our audit in respect of fraud, are; to identify and assess the risks of material misstatement of the financial statements due to fraud; to obtain sufficient appropriate audit evidence regarding the assessed risks of material misstatement due to fraud, through designing and implementing appropriate responses to those assessed risks; and to respond appropriately to instances of fraud or suspected fraud identified during the audit. However, the primary responsibility for the prevention and detection of fraud rests with both management and those charged with governance of the company.

Our approach was as follows:

- We obtained an understanding of the legal and regulatory requirements applicable to the charitable company and considered that the most significant are the UK and Republic of Ireland financial reporting standards as issued by the Financial Reporting Council
- We obtained an understanding of how the company complies with these requirements by discussions with management and those charged with governance.
- We assessed the risk of material misstatement of the financial statements, including the risk of material misstatement due to fraud and how it might occur, by holding discussions with management and those charged with governance.
- We inquired of management and those charged with governance as to any known instances of non-compliance or suspected non-compliance with laws and regulations.
- Based on this understanding, we designed specific appropriate audit procedures to identify instances of non-compliance with laws and regulations. This included making enquiries of management and those charged with governance and obtaining additional corroborative evidence as required.

As part of an audit in accordance with ISAs (UK) we exercise professional judgement and maintain professional scepticism throughout the audit. We also:

- Identify and assess the risks of material misstatement of the financial statements, whether due to fraud or error, design and perform audit procedures responsive to those risks, and obtain audit evidence that is sufficient and appropriate to provide a basis for our opinion. The risk of not detecting a material misstatement resulting from fraud is higher than for one resulting from error, as fraud may involve collusion, forgery, intentional omissions, misrepresentations, or the override of internal control.
- Obtain an understanding of internal control relevant to the audit in order to design audit procedures that are appropriate in the circumstances, but not for the purposes of expressing an opinion on the effectiveness of the company's internal control.
- Evaluate the appropriateness of accounting policies used and the reasonableness of accounting estimates and related disclosures made by the Board Members.
- Conclude on the appropriateness of the trustees' use of the going concern basis of accounting and, based on the audit evidence obtained, whether a material uncertainty exists related to events or conditions that may cast significant doubt on the company's ability to continue as a going concern. If we conclude that a material uncertainty exists, we are required to draw attention in our auditor's report to the related disclosures in the financial statements or, if such disclosures are inadequate, to modify our opinion. Our conclusions are based on the audit evidence obtained up to the date of our auditor's report. However, future events or conditions may cause the company to cease to continue as a going concern.

Notes to the Summary Financial Statements

1. Accounting policies

The financial reporting framework that has been applied in the preparation of these financial statements consists of the accounting standards issued by the Financial Reporting Council and applicable in the United Kingdom and Republic of Ireland including Financial Reporting Standard 102. These financial statements are prepared on the going concern basis under the historical cost convention. They are prepared in order to present financial information relating to the International Fund for Ireland ("the Fund") on a non-consolidated basis.

These summarised financial statements may not contain sufficient information to allow for a full understanding of the financial affairs of the Fund because they do not reflect the performance of the Enterprise Equity venture capital companies, which are wholly owned subsidiaries of the Fund. For further information the full annual financial statements, the auditors' report on those financial statements and the board members' annual report should be consulted; copies of these can be obtained from the Fund at either 28-32 Alfred Street, Belfast BT2 8EN or PO Box 2000, Dublin 2.

The full annual financial statements, from which this summary financial statement is derived and on which the auditors gave an unqualified opinion, were approved on 28 February 2023.

The principal accounting policies set out below have been applied consistently throughout the year.

Currencies

The Fund's transactions are effected in the currencies of each part of Ireland. The financial statements are presented in both currencies, each representing an aggregation of all of the transactions for the year in each part of Ireland translated at the respective exchange rates at the year end. Differences arising on the restatement, to the year end exchange rate, of monetary assets and liabilities (e.g. amounts due from funders, amounts due to projects and bank balances) at the start of the financial year are adjusted against the Fund balance, reported in the statement of total recognised gains and losses and accounted through reserves.

Non-monetary assets (e.g. equity or debt investments in subsidiaries) are not subject to retranslation at each year end. However, any foreign exchange gains or losses arising on the disposal of non-monetary assets are recognised in the income and expenditure account in the period that they arise.

Approved projects

The Fund make grants to fund or assist in the funding of projects and to make or enter into arrangements which are designed to meet expenditure that promotes economic and social advance and to encourage contact, dialogue and reconciliation between nationalists and unionists throughout Ireland.

The income and expenditure account reflects the anticipated cost of projects approved in the year (after deduction of projects which did not proceed) and related administration expenditure. The projects approved in the year are considered as a hard commitment, which is defined as the grant sum payable over the life of a project on which we have a written contractual agreement with the applicant. Hard commitments are charged to the income statement in the year that the contracts are signed. Project approvals are shown on the balance sheet as a liability, the balance being reduced as payments to grant recipients are released.

Loans

Funds disbursed to projects by way of loans are reflected in the total of the programme disbursements and are not included in the balance sheet. Any loan repayments received during the year are credited to the income and expenditure account.

Interest income

The income and expenditure account includes interest credited to the bank deposit accounts during the year together with interest accrued, but not actually credited, at the year end.

Investments

Fixed asset investments are stated at their purchase cost less any provision for diminution in value. Investment income is included in the income and expenditure account on an accruals basis.

Income recognition

Donor countries allocate funds on the basis of calendar years. The whole amount allocated is recognised in the financial year when it has been contractually allocated by the donor country.

Resources expended

Expenditure is recognised when a liability is incurred. Contractual arrangements and performance related grants are recognised as goods and services are supplied. Where costs cannot be directly attributed to a particular heading, they have been allocated to activities on a basis consistent with use of resources. Staff costs and overhead expenses are allocated to activities on the basis of staff time spent on those activities.

Judgments in applying accounting policies and key sources of estimation uncertainty

In the process of applying the fund's accounting policies, no significant judgements have been made. There are no key assumptions concerning the future or other key sources of estimation, that have a significant risk of raising a material adjustment to the carrying amounts of assets and liabilities within the next financial year.

The exchange rate adjustments relate to exchange gains and losses arising from the translation of US$ and Euro denominated donor contributions. The extent to which any gain or loss is realised will depend on exchange rate movements up to the date of receipt of contributions due.
